Buddhist Sanctuary · Niushou Mountain Scenic Area

The Niushou Mountain, a Buddhist sanctuary, is the birthplace of the Niutou sect of Chinese Zen Buddhism. On and around the mountain are natural attractions such as the Ganying Spring, the Hupao Spring, the Baigui Pool, the Doushuai Palace and the Wenshu Cave, as well as cultural attractions such as the Hongjue Temple, the Pagoda of Hongjue Temple and the Tomb of Zheng He.

A legacy of the Republic of China · Nanjing Presidential Palace

The Presidential Palace in Nanjing is the largest and best preserved of modern Chinese architectural complexes and a monument of modern Chinese history. On January 1st, 1912, Sun Yat-sen was sworn in here as the provisional President of the Republic of China. Later the complex became the Presidential Palace of the Nanjing National Government.

A Night Tour on the Qinhuai River · the Confucius Temple

The Fuzi Temple, or the Confucius Temple, is one of the four most famous temples in honor of Confucius in China. It is a hub of ancient Jiangnan culture, an aggregation of Jinling's history and the biggest ancient market in the country. The Wuyi Alley, the Jiangnan Examination House, the Qinhuai River and the Food Street are well-known attractions in the vicinity.

A Boat Cruise to the Confucius Temple and Night Views on the Qinhuai River

As the cradle of Nanjing's ancient civilization, the Qinhuai River enjoys a long-standing reputation in history for prosperity. Over many dynasties it was a gathering place of gifted scholars and beautiful ladies. And it is also "the most famous historical and cultural river in China".

Travel Tips

Weather in Nanjing: Nanjing has a subtropical monsoon climate with four distinct seasons and abundant rainfall. The city features short spring and autumn, long summer and winter and a big difference in temperature between winter and summer.

Spring: In Nanjing, spring usually begins around April 1st. With a temperature of 6° C to 14° C, the season brings gentle breezes, warm sunshine and blooming flowers, and it is especially suitable for outings.

Summer: Summer usually comes to Nanjing in early June. The maximum temperature can be higher than 36° C. The short rainy period sets in June and July, bringing not much rainfall. Tourists are advised to prevent sunstroke.

Autumn: Autumn in Nanjing is brief but the most pleasant of all seasons. It has a cool temperature of around 20° C, ideal for outdoor activities.

Winter: Nanjing has cold and dry winters, which come abruptly with a minimum temperature of around -13° C. January and February bring snowfall, though the amount of snow is small. A heavy snow, if it does come, will lend this modern city a special charm that reminds people of the ancient capital of Jinling.

The package price includes admissions (for the Niushou Mountain Scenic Area and the Presidential Palace), fares (for coach rides and the boat cruise to the Confucius Temple) and the cost of lunch.
